Rhema Group and the Learning Lab challenge the Education Sector to invest in Emotional Intelligence

Rhema Group | | 26-February-2007

In his keynote at 'The Changing Faces of Learning' Conference this month Professor Steve Molyneux, Learning Lab Director, challenged schools to align classroom environments with real world environments by infusing 21st century skills and technologies. Rhema Group MD, Jeremy Francis, stressed the need for all educators to embrace EQ (Emotional Intelligence) and not just IQ in addressing the challenges they face; to embrace the 'softer' skills of leadership, change management and partnership working.

Rhema Group reduces the risks of flexible and remote working

Rhema Group | 24-Feb-2007.

Flexible and remote working involving employees in working some or all of their hours from home, or another non-office based location, presents employers with both opportunities and risks. It is important therefore not only to assess the individual's capability to work flexibly and/or remotely but also to assess their suitability to do so. Rhema Group's assessment process, known as the Profile XT, addresses both needs.
